本次輔導建議	This is the fourth class I've observed. There's quite a lot of English incorporated into the music class now. Gabby has shown great confidence when using English. Priscilla is such a good story teller. The song was a brilliant idea to help students, hopefully, remember the three important words. I'm totally impressed!!! Below is my feedback: (I'm getting a bit pickier) *Instead of "face to them," say "face them." *I seemed to hear "come to the floors"?? It should be "Come to the floor." Since asking students to come and sit on the floor happens quite often, I would expect Gabby to use all English from now on. In order to make sure they listen to your instruction you may try this: "Now, I'll need you to come to the floor. Listen carefully. Boys with odd ID numbers, come and sit here. Boys with even ID numbers, come and sit here...." *I seemed to hear "What's happen"?? Remember, it's "what happened?" *It's already too late but if you use the gender equality song again in the future, I'd like to suggest to change "We can do it" to "We want/like it." *Also, if the question of "who supports William to buy a doll" will be used again, I'd like to suggest to change it to "who buys a doll for William?" (Am I correct that Grandma bought a doll for William?) *I seemed to hear "Do you have book?" It should be "Do you have a/your book?"

*"Chair in" is understandable in the context; however, the correct way to say it is "Tuck your chair in under the desk" but you can simply say "Tuck your chair in."
*I was so thrilled to hear Gabby pronounce "difficult" greatly this time. Way to go, Gabby! ;)
